Itinerary

Day 1 - Vancouver, British Columbia
May 7 2027, Fri | Depart 4:00 pm

Skyscrapers, mountains, and ocean come together seamlessly in Vancouver, without ever feeling crowded. Stanley Park alone is worth the visit, 1,000 acres of forest, totem poles, and scenic seawall right at the edge of downtown, while Gastown's cobblestone streets invite a leisurely afternoon and the local food scene punches well above its weight.

The city's multicultural character shows up especially at mealtime, where exceptional dim sum can be found just blocks from a classic seafood shack. With mountains visible from downtown streets and ski slopes less than an hour away, Vancouver manages to feel like an outdoor destination even before the ship leaves the harbor. Consistently ranked among the most livable cities in the world, it combines that outdoor access with genuine urban polish, excellent public transit, walkable neighborhoods, and a waterfront locals actually use rather than just admire.

Your ship departs promptly at 4:00 pm, so we recommend arriving at least 2-3 hours early to smoothly navigate check-in and boarding. All ship amenities are open and ready, so kickstart your vacation with a refreshing drink or a delicious snack.

Day 2 - Inside Passage (Cruising)
May 8 2027, Sat | Sightseeing

Some days on an Alaska itinerary skip the port entirely, and that's very much the point. The ship simply glides through the scenery, forested coastline, granite cliffs, and glacier-carved inlets unfolding for hours at a time. Onboard naturalists often spot wildlife before passengers do, a whale surfacing here, an eagle circling there, and most people find themselves at the rail with a coffee, taking it all in quietly.

There's no schedule to follow on a day like this, no excursion to catch or meeting point to remember. The pace is set entirely by the coastline, which for many travelers turns out to be exactly the kind of unhurried break they didn't know they needed. Without a port pulling attention toward shops or excursions, the focus shifts entirely to the landscape itself, which for many becomes the most memorable part of the entire trip. Ask returning guests what stands out most from an Alaska cruise, and a scenic cruising day often comes up before any single port does.

Day 3 - Ketchikan (Ward Cove), Alaska
May 9 2027, Sun | Docked 7:00 am - 5:00 pm

You've never tasted salmon so fresh. Known as the 'Salmon Capital of the World', Ketchikan is also the ancestral home of the Tlingit people, who have carved the world's largest collection of totem poles. If you're up for an adventure, take a canoe and nature trail excursion through the rain forest or a wilderness exploration followed by a sumptuous crab feast you'll long remember.

Day 4 - Sitka, Alaska
May 10 2027, Mon | Docked 8:00 am - 4:00 pm

History layers together in interesting ways in Sitka. Onion domes top St. Michael's Cathedral, a remnant of the town's days as capital of Russian America, standing just blocks from centuries of Tlingit tradition that predates it by far longer. Sitka National Historical Park showcases an impressive collection of totem poles set against coastal rainforest, while sea otters drift lazily in nearby kelp beds and brown bears roam the surrounding woods.

Facing the open Pacific rather than tucked behind sheltering islands, Sitka experiences a different rhythm of light and weather than most inside ports, brighter skies on clear days and bigger swells rolling in from offshore. The transfer of Alaska from Russian to American hands in 1867 actually took place right here in Sitka, and reminders of that pivotal moment are woven throughout the town's museums and historic sites. For history-minded travelers, walking these streets means tracing a turning point that shaped the entire state's future.

Day 5 - Icy Strait Point, Alaska
May 11 2027, Tue | Docked 7:00 am - 5:00 pm

Just outside the Tlingit village of Hoonah sits a beautifully restored 1930s salmon cannery, now reimagined as part cultural landmark, part adventure destination, offering a quieter alternative to Alaska's larger, busier ports. Adventure seekers can take on one of the longest ziplines in the world aboard the Icy Strait Point ZipRider, while those looking for a gentler pace can enjoy storytelling and dance rooted in generations of Tlingit tradition. Offshore, the whale watching is some of the best in the state, thanks to particularly rich humpback feeding grounds nearby.

Hoonah remains an active fishing community, and it's common to see local boats coming and going with the day's catch just steps from where cruise passengers explore. The cannery building itself once processed millions of pounds of salmon each season before closing in the 1950s, and much of its original equipment and structure has been preserved as part of the visitor experience, offering a tangible link to the industry that shaped so much of coastal Alaska's early economy.

Day 6 - Juneau, Alaska
May 12 2027, Wed | Docked 7:00 am - 4:30 pm

No roads lead to Juneau, only boats and planes, a fitting detail for a capital city that still feels genuinely wild. Mountains rise on one side, water stretches out on the other, leaving little room in between for anything but a compact, character-filled downtown. Mendenhall Glacier sits just 12 miles from the city center, close enough for an easy afternoon visit, its brilliant blue ice framed by waterfalls and forest trails, while black bears occasionally appear fishing in nearby streams and humpback whales surface in the surrounding channel.

Downtown is easy to explore on foot, lined with weathered wooden storefronts, excellent seafood spots, and a state capitol building tucked in almost casually among them. It's a rare case of a capital city that feels more like a frontier outpost than a seat of government. That isolation has also shaped Juneau's identity in unexpected ways, from a strong local arts scene to a genuine sense of community among residents who choose to live somewhere so remote, character that comes through quickly even on a short visit.

Day 7 - Hubbard Glacier, Alaska
May 13 2027, Thu | Docked 7:30 am - 11:00 am

The numbers alone are striking: 76 miles long, six miles wide at the face, with ice walls rising up to 400 feet above the water. While many of Alaska's glaciers are retreating, Hubbard remains one of the rare exceptions still advancing, and that difference shows in the calving. Massive slabs of ice break away with little warning, and the crack of splitting ice reaches the ship just after the ice hits the water. Conversations pause, cameras rise, it's a moment that photographs capture only partially.

Disenchantment Bay earned its name from early explorers who came looking for a passage that didn't exist, though today the disappointment is long forgotten, replaced by the sheer scale of the glacier. Ships often linger here for an hour or more just to take it all in. Scientists have studied Hubbard closely for decades, in part because its advance occasionally threatens to seal off Russell Fjord entirely, turning it into a landlocked lake, an ongoing tug of war between ice and water that adds a layer of quiet drama to a glacier already ranking among Alaska's most dramatic sights.

Day 8 - Seward, Alaska
Arrive 6:00 am

Resurrection Bay sets the scene here, with the jagged Kenai Mountains rising sharply behind a town that's small in size but big on scenery. Seward serves as the main gateway to Kenai Fjords National Park, and boat tours venture into the fjords where glaciers meet the sea and wildlife appears in remarkable numbers, otters, whales, and calving ice among them. Back in town, the Alaska SeaLife Center offers close encounters with puffins and seals, while the scenic train ride to Anchorage delivers some of the best mountain views in the state.

The town rebuilt much of its waterfront after a major 1964 earthquake and tsunami, and that resilience remains part of local memory. Today Seward feels settled and welcoming, the kind of small port where fishing boats and cruise excursions share the harbor without much friction. Beyond the boat tours, Seward has become something of a hub for outdoor recreation year-round, drawing hikers, kayakers, and anglers well beyond the summer cruise season.

Your cruise may have ended, but the adventure continues. Take advantage of the fantastic activities in the area. If you're flying out, please keep your departure flight time in mind and plan accordingly.
